

Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to enthusiastically recommend Liz for any senior role that requires exceptional strategic coordination and a deep capacity for collaboration. I had the pleasure of managing Liz directly for 3.5 years in her role as Senior Program Manager and People Manager. Liz is available for this next opportunity due to a recent organizational restructuring within our company, and I can assure you that her departure is a significant loss to our team.

In the time I worked with her, she proved herself to be proactive and a force multiplier, consistently turning strategic priorities into large-scale, measurable execution. Liz managed a team of 9 program managers and accessibility analysts, in addition to a large vendor team of testers and engineers driving accessibility programs at Google. Liz managed a portfolio of critical 40+ products driving on accessibility conformance and usability. She drove progress through strategic prioritization, work allocation, stakeholder alignment, and by leading executive steering committee groups. She is also a skilled project manager, and built effective work tracking mechanisms to ensure her team and dependent efforts were on track.

Liz is comfortable driving large-scale operations. In 2025, her team completed 220+ complex conformance testing projects for her portfolio, reviewed 230+ strategic launches, and fixed or advised on 300+ bugs. Her work also transformed our procurement process, to ensure our vendors and third-party products go through reviews and work well for employees with disabilities.

Liz excels at influencing and bringing people together, fostering an inclusive environment, and navigating disagreements among experts and stakeholders. She was often praised as an effective manager, who is comfortable challenging people directly while caring deeply about them as a person. She demonstrated exceptional skill in navigating personnel issues and resolving team conflicts with fairness and directness, which is reflected in her consistently high manager feedback scores throughout the years.

Liz is a high-impact leader who delivers measurable results while also building the kind of team culture that retains top talent. Her ability to operate at scale, transform complex processes, and navigate organizational change with directness and care makes her an asset to any organization facing growth or structural change.

I recommend Liz without reservation and am confident she will exceed expectations in any senior program or people management role. Please feel free to contact me if you have further questions.
